

ABSTRACT:

The quality of recorded images with for example a high speed camera can be deteriorated by light modulation which is a consequence of for example gas-discharge lamps running at a lower frequency with respect to the camera.

- A camera according to the invention provides light modulation removal means
- 5 which tackle this problem by handling fields of the image different depending on the light modulation.

Fig. 1